From the Desk of Fr. Mark

Hi, everyone.

I hope your Lenten journey is a good one. We still have a few weeks to go till Easter. Hang in there with your fasts, prayers and almsgivings. There has been good attendance at Mass, Stations of the Cross and other programs. Keep up the good work. At Easter, we will celebrate God's great love for us and that God's life will always have the victory.

Part of our Lenten journey this year has been to go through the seven deadly sins. This week we look at anger. I have a couple of anger stories to maybe help with our reflection. When I worked at Children's Hospital in Columbus, sometimes life seemed out of control. It is never on the mind of a parent to consider that their child should have a birth defect, be hurt in an accident, have an unheard of disease or a thousand other reasons why their child should be in a hospital. Life, at that moment, does not seem fair. There are more questions than answers. A parent oftentimes says that if they could take on the pain of their child, they would. It is at those times when I experienced anger at its finest. I've only been hit a couple of times in my ministry and they were both at Children's Hospital. When life seemed so difficult and out of control, anger got the best of a couple of individuals. They took the pain from their children and gave it to me, literally. As a chaplain, I was in the midst of the unrest and was a personal reminder of what was a personal nightmare. In both instances of being struck, the next day when I visited the child, brought parents who were remorseful. Anger had gotten the best of them and they had gotten out of control in an out of control circumstance. And how did I respond? I sued the hospital and the parents. Just kidding!!!!!! Forgiveness is the answer to anger. I let the parents know that there were no hard feelings and that I would walk with them through their scary times. Sometimes we forget that God is with us through difficult times, also. We also forget that there are loving people to walk with us when life gets challenging. When we let anger control us, deadly things can happen. Anger is normal in these circumstances. Anger is a response to fear, doubt, and being out of control. Our response to anger is what makes it deadly or not.

The second anger incident that I would like to address is about myself. People sometimes ask me if I get angry. I assured them that I do and that they would be able to tell. I've only had a couple of times that I really got angry. When I get really angry, I turn green. I'm not kidding. It's not like the Incredible Hulk that I have amazing strength, but my skin color turns a pale green. When I was playing basketball in college, my good knee went out. Our team had already beaten the team we were playing. How could my good knee go out? I sat out a quarter. I wanted to go back in and did for fifteen seconds until I was back on the ground. I should have never gone back in, but I was green and the coach couldn't say no to the Incredible Hulk who had just turned green right in front of him. I look back and think it is funny. Carrying anger (grudges) and making decisions out of anger rarely end up well. If the gifts of forgiveness and understanding are not part of our actions, deadly things can happen.

People say that we live in an angry world. Yes, the world can seem pretty confusing without clear answers. But there are ways to bring life to such situations. Faith helps when we remember that God walks the journey with us and He has all the answers we need. Forgiveness helps as pride can only add to the anger. Understanding is vital in that we realize that we journey together through life and we should walk as friends and not enemies. Have a peaceful week, everyone. May God walk with us all.

Plastic Mats for Homeless

Ruth Kuhlman's 5A class is learning to make mats for the homeless. Kay Brown is teaching them the art of planning. Plastic bags are cut into strips and woven into mats for sleeping on or covering up with. We need donations of plastic bags like those from Walmart, Meijer or Kalida Market. The bags can be left at the entrances of church. Thanks for supporting this Lenten Work of Mercy.
